

Resources for Peer Mediators

The Global Peacebuilding Center at the U.S. Institute of Peace offers a range of resources to help peer mediators improve their mediation skills and enhance their understanding of the role that mediation plays in international conflict management and peacebuilding. We also offer support to peer mediation teachers and organizations:

- Mediation skills training and other onsite educational workshops. Contact us at buildingpeace@usip.org to organize a specialized workshop at the Global Peacebuilding Center for your peer mediation group.
- Stories of international mediation in action, including stories from our work in the field and our local partners in countries around the world. Find these resources at www.usip.org and www.buildingpeace.org.
- Access to leading international mediators, through the Global Peacebuilding Center's onsite educational programs and online forums. Contact us to arrange a briefing with one of our international mediators.
- Online portal to peacebuilding knowledge and skills, where students can explore the world of international conflict management and peacebuilding as they earn stamps in their Virtual Passport; watch videos telling the stories of individual peacebuilders; share their own stories with other young peacebuilders; and much more. Visit us at www.buildingpeace.org.
- Peacebuilding Toolkit for Educators and other educator resources to support teachers as they bring peacebuilding themes and skills into the classroom. Find lesson plans, activities, simulations, and more at www.buildingpeace.org/educators. Contact us to arrange a workshop for your peer mediation educators!

International Mediation in Action

The U.S. Institute of Peace is active in conflict zones around the world, preventing, managing and resolving violent conflicts. We do this by conducting direct mediation efforts as well as by training others in mediation and facilitation skills. Learn more at <http://www.usip.org/category/issue-areas/mediation-and-facilitation>.

The United States Institute of Peace (USIP) is our country's global conflict management center, working to prevent, mitigate, and resolve international conflict through nonviolent means. The Global Peacebuilding Center extends USIP's educational work with young people and educators, and helps to develop the next generation of peacebuilders.
